MARSHALL GROUP TO ATTEND FIELD MEET AT MAYFIELD

All Day Sessions Will Be Held at Experiment Farm, Saturday, August 27.

INSPECTION IN MORNING; PROGRAM FOR AFTERNOON

An all day meeting of farm men and women will be held at the Soil Experiment Field, south of Mayfield, on Saturday, August 27th, beginning at ten o'clock. The meeting is an annual affair attended by farmers from all parts of the Purchase Region. Of especial interest to those attending the meeting this year will be the inspection of newly introduced strains of Japan Clover, one of which, the Korean, has made more than twice the growth of the common variety grown alongside of it and further it matures seed two or three weeks earlier. The usual inspection of the fertilizer and crop rotation experiments will be made and the necessary explanations given. In one of these tests which has been going for thirteen years the use of limestone and phosphate applied once in the four years rotation period has increased the yield of corn 12-12 bushels per acre; soybean hay 1097 pounds per acre; wheat 9-1-2 bushels per acre; and clover hay 2745 pounds per acre, over and above the yield of these crops on ground not fertilized. A number of tobacco rotations are to be seen in which various fertilizer combinations have been used with considerable variations in yield of crops resulting therefrom. Fertilizer under cotton likewise show some interesting results.

The entire morning will be given over to the inspection of the field. Following dinner a program has been arranged which includes talks by men from the Experiment Station dealing with soils and crops questions, but more time will be devoted to inspection of the plots than in previous years.

The afternoon program is as follows:-

1:30 P. M. "How Experimental Fields are aiding the farmers in soil improvement" — J. F. Freeman, Experiment Station, Lexington, Kentucky.

2:00 P. M. "What most of the soils in the purchase need" — S. C. Jones, Experiment Station, Lexington, Kentucky.

2:30 P. M. "How to grow sweet clover" — Esq. H. L. Radford, Kirksey, Kentucky.

3:00 P. M. "Control Measures for Common Tobacco Diseases" — Dr. W. D. Valeau, Plant Pathologist, Experiment Station, Lexington, Kentucky.

Marshall county delegation will leave court house at 8:30.

Charlestown State Prison, Boston, Aug. 23. — Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti shortly after midnight this morning paid the penalty of death exacted by the state for murder.

VETERANS WITH TUBERCULOSIS IN HOSPITAL AT OUTWOOD, KENTUCKY WITHOUT FUNDS ASKS CONTRIBUTIONS

The State Headquarters of the Disabled American Veterans at Lexington is appealing to the patriotic citizens of Kentucky to contribute towards a fund to assist eighty-three tubercular World War veterans now confined in the U. S. Veterans Bureau Hospital at Outwood, Kentucky and who are not receiving any compensation from the Government.

Prior to July first this year the American Red Cross and the Knights of Columbus have donated the money for such purposes as furnishing stamps, envelopes, toilet articles, tobacco and in emergency any financial needs. They discontinued their work at that time leaving these veterans without any assistance. There are at present two hundred and seventy-eight veterans of the late War confined in the hospital and eighty-three without compensation and the government does not furnish funds for the mentioned articles or any money for emergency and in case of death only $100.00 towards funeral expenses.

SYNOPSIS

John Ballard, left poor by the same fate that deprives him of his parents, works his way through college, then devotes his career to fighting negligent railroads, cherishing a vendetta against them for killing his parents. Phil Hardin, a college chum now a railroad official, offers John a staggering salary. John wavers; it would be his chance to wed Viola Ruskin. But through a misunderstanding Viola weds Phil. John turns down the job, and aims at a political career. Jordan, the money king behind the railroad, warns him not to become an enemy.

The time had passed, and not so long ago, in the days when James Hardin, as a young man, had built it up, when the N. Y. and C. V. had given promise of being one of the greatest factors in the transportation system of the north-east. It had served—as it still did serve—a rich and prosperous section, dotted with thriving manufacturing cities, and surrounded by rich agricultural districts.

In those days there had been much local pride in the railway, and its stockholders had been numerous in the territory it served. The cities and towns through which it ran had regarded it as, in a sense, their own railway; they had always resented the idea that Wall street should have any measure of control over the property. Jordan's entrance into the situation had been gradual; it had been managed quietly, secretly, through mysterious arrangements between the financier and James Hardin.

Now, without ostentation, without real public knowledge of what was going on, the N. Y. and C. V. was being used as a pawn in a great game. A few years ago it had paid good dividends on its stock both common and preferred; its bonds had been gilt edged securities. No hint that interest might not be paid on these bonds had ever been heard. Its surplus had been enormous; the road had been rich enough to finance, from its own resources, without expensive borrowing, such necessary improvements as were required to keep it up.

Gradually under Jordan, all this had changed. The surplus had been wiped out entirely. New bond issues had been made. The road's debt was far greater than it had been; no dividends had been paid for some years. And though, as yet, interest on all the bonds had been promptly paid, there were constant ugly rumors that even on these payments there might, some day soon, be defaults. No longer was there the ready market for N. Y. and C. V. bonds that there had been; wise investment houses frowned when their clients talked of buying such bonds and urged the selection instead of other securities, which were, they said, safer—even though the lowered price of the N. Y. and C. V. bonds made the yield look high.

George Warren talked more than once to John Ballard of these matters.

"The time may come," he said, "when you will be obliged to go into these things officially. You will do well to make yourself familiar with the affairs of the road now."

"I've been puzzled by things I've heard," John admitted. "What have they done with the money?"

"Many things," said Warren. "They have paid enormous salaries for one thing. James Hardin for years was content with a salary of fifty thousand dollars a year. He enjoyed, of course, a good income from his stock holdings as well. His son's salary is five times what his father's was—from the N. Y. and C. V. alone. In addition he draws several other salaries as the head of some of the subsidiary companies."

"Then, if you will look back, you will find that the road has bought—for very large sums—control of a number of other properties. It paid five million dollars for the coast-wise shipping lines it took over four years ago. Who owned those lines? Jordan! And the actual property—ships, docks, warehouses—wasn't worth three million dollars at the most liberal estimate. It has bought up moribund trolley lines, practically put out of Jordan's hired man, forced to do as he was told. He was riding straight for a fall—and, if John knew anything about him, he didn't even know it.

So far as John could tell Phil's marriage had been a happy one. He and Viola had no children, but they were seen much together, and Viola, from all that John could gather, was happy and contented. She was still a youthful and beautiful woman; he saw her sometimes—at a distance, even met her once or twice face to face.

And it terrified John to think of what the future might hold for her.

Ten years had passed into history. John Ballard sat in his office, frowning as he read the morning paper—the Ventnor Sun. His office was no longer a room in the dingy little red brick building that had seen the beginnings of his law practice, however. It was a stately, high-ceiled chamber in the County Court Building.

NATIONAL DEFENCE WILL BE INCREASED

Coolidge Okays 'Ample Provision' for Both Army and Navy in 1928 Budget.

Rapid City, S. D., Aug. 25.—President Coolidge has approved "a material increase" in next year's expenditures for the national defense, Herbert M. Lord, director of the budget, declared upon concluding an all-day conference at the summer White House.

Both the army and navy will be "amply provided for," General Lord declared. President Coolidge desires that sufficient funds be recommended to Congress to carry out the first year's work on all authorized naval craft, including the six cruisers which Congress authorized for last session.

At the age of 19 Young Beckham became principal of the Bardonia High school. During his career as a teacher he studied law and in 1893 was admitted to the bar.

In 1894 he was sent to the Legislature from Nelson county without opposition. He was then 24 years of age, the minimum age for legislators.

Threatening pulmonary trouble caused him to go to New Mexico in the winter of 1894, returning in the spring of 1895. In 1896 he made the race for representative and was successful. In 1898 he was elected Speaker of the House, the youngest speaker the state ever had.

The year 1899 found Beckham the Democratic nominee for Lieutenant Governor, with William Goebel, heading the ticket.

In 1900 following an exciting contest Goebel was declared Governor by the State Assembly after W. S. Taylor, republican candidate had received the certification of election from the Secretary of State. Goebel was assassinated in February of that year and Beckham took the oath of office as governor.

After six months in which Kentucky was under two governments one headed by Hickman with troops at the Franklin Court house and the other headed by Taylor with troops guarding the Old Capitol building, Taylor finally abdicated following a United States Supreme court decision that the General Assembly was in the right.

Beckham served as governor until 1903, when he was selected as the nominee again and defeated John W. Yerkes, Republican by 3,700 majority.

During his regime he liquidated and inherited state obligation of $1,700,000, established two normal schools—one at Bowling Green and one at Richmond, and collected and old war debt from the Federal government of $1,324,000. The present state capital building was also begun during his second administration.

After being defeated for the U. S. Senate in 1907 he retired to his practice of law, where he remained until 1914, when he was elected to the senate, serving until 1921.

A Time Saving Table

HERE'S some information for the housewife which should prove a time saver and a convenience. Her greatest time saver, of course, is the use of canned foods. If she is detained late by club, social or public activities she need not worry about the evening meal for her family if she has a well-stocked emergency shelf. From these ready-to-use foods she can quickly prepare a substantial meal of several courses—a meal that is both nourishing and appetizing. But most recipes call for ingredients by cupfuls, whereas the contents of various sized cans are estimated in ounces or pounds. So there remains the matter of measurements in order to further expedite the preparation of such an impromptu meal. In order to reconcile these two ways of measuring we have determined by actual have been rendering services and extending time to people that did not have the ready money for the last 15 years.

They also bought a new motor hearse, built a display room, secured a lowering device and added other equipments in order to give the best service possible to their home people.

Many say that they render service far superior to that in much larger towns.

After all this preparation they have received numerous compliments for being so modern in their service and equipment.

A Time Saving Table

HERE'S some information for the housewife which should prove a time saver and a convenience. Her greatest time saver, of course, is the use of canned foods. If she is detained late by club, social or philanthropic activities she need not worry about the evening meal for her family if she has a well-stocked emergency shelf. From these ready-to-serve foods she can quickly prepare a substantial meal of several courses—a meal that is both nourishing and appetizing. But most recipes call for ingredients by cupfuls, whereas the contents of various sized cans are estimated in ounces or pounds. So there remains the matter of measurements in order to further expedite the preparation of such an impromptu meal. In order to reconcile these two ways of measuring we have determined by actual tests the quantity of food contained in the various sizes of cans, and have computed it in cupful measures.

Cans by Cupfuls

No.	1	2	3	4	5	10
Can	1 1/3 cups	2 1/2 "	3 1/2 "	4 "	5 "	13 "

This data is submitted in tabular form so that it may be kept in the kitchen for constant reference.

The use of this table will prove not only a convenience, but it will enable the housewife to buy more thriftily by always getting the right size of can.

Piles and Rupture Cured Without The Knife

The great advantage of NON-SURGICAL treatment of Piles and Rupture is its simplicity. The patient is treated in the doctors office and does not have to quit work or go to bed. A few treatments given at intervals of a week apart makes the cure. Cures thus made are just as good as those obtained by the knife or any other treatment.

Twenty-five years experience in Non-Surgical treatment of Piles and fifteen years in treating Rupture, convinces the author that every case of Piles and at least 85 per cent of all cases of Rupture can be successfully treated without surgery. The author has the names of 39 persons in the city of Paducah whom he has cured of Rupture without the knife.

ALL ARMY TRADE SCHOOLS OPENED

Many Other Branches of Services
Are Also Open for Enlistment.

The United States Army has thrown open all trade schools for enlisted men for the year of 1927-28 and has the following branches for applicants, the trade facilities are the same in all branches, it is just a matter of choice of branches of service the

Civilian schools, give the United States Army by far the advantage in scholars trained.

Each year, young men who desire a trade career are fast turning to the army for their schooling, the reason for this is the army charges the scholar nothing
for their training, but pays them
a substantial salary, furnishes them with board, clothing, dental and medical treatment free, each soldier is given a thirty day furlough under pay each year with full pay.

George M. Dearing, recruiting officer for the army at Paducah stated today, men are now permitted to enlist, for Hawaii and Panama as well as the states,

vice as well as home service, of

THE HOUSE THAT SERVICE BUILT

UNITY

Brother Harris filled his regular appointment Sunday, August 21, 1927. We had two meetings Sunday, Sunday School and preaching in the morning and Christian Endeavor and preaching again in the afternoon. An invitation to join the church was given in the afternoon and eight young people were received into the church with great joy.

A Christian Endeavor has been organized at this church, which is doing great work among the young people in the community. This work is drawing the young people into closer friendship than any other thing that has happened in this community. We went on a picnic Saturday, August 20th, and everybody enjoyed themselves playing games, singing and those that did not enjoy themselves at that appeared as though they did about 6:30 o'clock when the supper was spread. We feel like our society was honored by having two Christian Endeavor workers from Paducah with us on the picnic. Miss Elizabeth Foe and Miss Gladys Gaines.

After our games and fun was over we marched into church at Union Ridge with the name of our society fastened on each loyal member. The W. W. C. E. is the name of Willing Workers Christian Endeavor.

We owe the progress of the W. W. C. E. to Miss Elizabeth Foe by organizing it. She is pleased with the start so well that she brought Miss Gladys Gaines an endeavor worker from Paducah to observe our program Sunday August 21. By both the girls helping in our society we feel like we rendered a great program Sunday.

As we are young people and do not know how to do the things of the society as well as the name stands for, we need the help of all who are willing to speak a kind word.

We will invite other young people to our society, that are willing to help in anyway they can to increase the work for which it stands, as Miss Gladys Gaines and Miss Elizabeth Foe did on the picnic Saturday afternoon and in the program Sunday afternoon.

The W. W. C. E. wants to show to its community that it can bring the work of God to a higher standard than where the older people have left it.

Hints For the Housewife

TWO new conveniences for the housewife have to do with the indispensable tin can. This humble object's virtues are many. It saves time, labor and money, and makes available to the most modest purses many foods not obtainable in any other way. But one difficulty that has confronted housewives is that the keys by means of which some cans are opened have had a mysterious way of disappearing. They either dropped off the tongue on which they were generally hung, or, if they were delivered loose with the can, they were put down in an absent moment and mislaid. Another difficulty has been that the strips of tin that are rolled back from the can by means of the key fail to tear evenly and break off.

The first difficulty is now obviated on the cans of a number of food products by electrically welding the key to the top of the can. Just back of the point on the can to which the key is welded, it is partially cut through so that it breaks off easily when wanted.

The second difficulty has been met, in cans which are opened by rolling back a strip from the side, by cutting diagonal grooves in herringbone fashion on this thin strip of tin, so that if the strip does not tear evenly these grooves at an angle will guide the tearing part of it past the defective part, and it will not break off on the key.
